

It's Not About Trans in Sports

by

Phil Rasmussen

We are a nation that is at war with itself, and most of us don't even realize it. The radical left, socialists, and would be tyrants are foisting their ideology on us by using flawed narratives, false science, and outright lies. Their ultimate goal is to control every aspect of our lives.

Our current president and his administration, along with supporters within every branch of government, industry, business, education, the media and society as a whole are complicate in this dangerous, attempted coup.

Since the beginning of history, women have strived to stand equally alongside men, but never the inverse. As in the past and now in the present, there have always been men who attempt to "keep women in their place," whether it is outright blatant control of women physically, psychologically and/or socially, or overlording and/or dominating women through transgenderism or gender identity.

Biologically there is a definite difference between men and women both mentally and physically. No matter, to whatever degree transgender surgery or social identity is taken, males will always be males and females always females. The physiology of the sexes is different and neither can morph into the other sex!

Riley Gains and other women recently protested having to compete against transwomen in sports. Although they are calling on others to support this protest, it is not, as many believe, a movement. Instead, the call is for the defense for womanhood.

The far left and socialists are using the psychological inability of transwomen to recognize and accept that they have a definite physical advantage over most women to insert themselves into women sports. This inability also speaks volumes toward their poor mental and emotional condition.

Women, whether athletes or not, should not and do not have to put up with the presence of a transwoman or any male identifying as a woman in the locker rooms and bathrooms. This is nothing more than sexual abuse, harassment, and exploitation. All of which are against the law.

Take away the sociological political push for transwomen to compete in women's sport, the resolution of the problem is a simple concept and easy done. With a few strokes of the pen a new category in every sport or endeavor can be created. The left and socialists will ignore or attempt to dissuade creating such a category from becoming law or general practice. Either two “divisions” can be created:

Men Open Women
Men Trans Women

IMHO the desired division would be “Men Open Women.” However it is understandable that transwomen may not want to compete in an Open division as they would probably be competing against men as well. In this case a Trans division could be added to the Men Open Women division setup.

Sixteen states have already ruled that athletes must compete in events according to their biological sex. Ideally ALL states should have such laws and roughly 2/3 of them do not. However, this is not a states’ issue for many reasons which is discussed later on. It is a federal issue and should be handled at that level.

The concept of women’s rights is not new. As far back as 1776, women’s rights were at the forefront of American politics. Abigail Adams (John Adams, president) first pushed for women independence and later on female education.

In 1848, the first women’s rights convention was held and became the precursor to the 19th Amendment to the US Constitution. Since then women’s rights have been recognized and endorsed by many politicians, presidents and law.

Even with this history of women’s rights, we fail to fully understand the implications of the LGBTQ+ push for transgender and social sexual identity on these rights with regard to the separation of the biological sexes not only in the locker rooms and bathrooms, but also on the playing fields of sports and business.

Many women athletes, who have protested LGBTQ+ members in their locker rooms, bathrooms, and athletic events, have essentially been told to “shut up or leave.” Such verbiage and actions from school/university administrators and sport organizations is degrading to all women AND is against the laws of our nation. The attempt to shut up or silence the women protestors is a blatant attempt to deny them their 1st Amendment right to free speech. It is a form of “cancel culture” that has social and psychological impact on society as a whole and women specifically.

Such attempts to control not only their speech but also their future, is a violation of law in an aspect hitherto not discussed. The ultimate goal of sporting events for every school/university and sports organization is hold events for the purpose of raising money. In other words, they are involved in commerce, regardless of being a profit or non-profit entity. When events are held in other states the Interstate Commerce Act comes into play. Similarly if events are held within the state where the organization resides, state commerce laws are in effect.

Whether involved in sports or not, women across the nation need to stand up and defend their rights. There is adequate proof that the LGBTQ+ community is willing to forego women rights not only to privacy but also to competition, and other social interactions. Such action not only denigrates women but also marginalizes them.

The majority of the LGBTQ+ community has publically stated that it supports the socialistic movements that do nothing for supporting the rights of others but rather pressing their thumb of suppression on all people. The problem is that while they want things their way because of how they see themselves, they are willing to discard the individualism and identity of women and men.

In other words, injecting transwomen into women sports is nothing more than a common brain washing technique used to strip people of their self identity and individualism.

Many liberals, far-left subscribers, and socialists believe that socialism is a good idea until they realize that their interpretation of socialism does not bode well for their hunger for independence, freedom of thought, or to chase their dreams of a better life.

Socialism has not worked and never will. No socialist government has lasted more than 74 years (USSR). While it is nice to dream of a utopia world where there is peace and prosperity for all, it will never happen as long as people try to control others.

You can dream about living in a community with highly desirable or near-perfect qualities. Socialists have taken those dreams and have made promises to you for a better world. To make those promises they have schemed, and lied, and cheated politically, economically, educationally, and spiritually. In 1516, Thomas More introduced the word "Utopia" to describe a perfect imaginary world.. The word itself means "no place" or "nowhere."

There will never be a utopian world, country, state, city, village, hamlet, or home as long as humans can "rule the roost." Hoping for a utopian environment is shear liberal and far-left stupidity.

So why do you put up with this nonsense?