

Left Behind

Sorry but this commentary is not about the “Left Behind” series written by Tim LaHaye and Jerry Jenkins. Although discussion of this series would be more pertinent to us today than ever before, our discussion will be on the military equipment and other items that Biden, the State Department, and the Military left behind when evaluating from Afghanistan.

While major emphasis on Biden’s Afghanistan withdraw debacle has been on the number of Americans and Afghans exfiltration from the country, more recently the media and others have criticized the amount of military equipment left behind.

Much of this criticism has been directed toward Biden for leaving the equipment behind, thus providing arms to many different terrorist organization, our enemies. This in itself is a treasonous act, and Biden, et.al. should pay the highest punishment that our laws provide. While many believe there are levels of treason, and thus punishment should be accordingly assigned, this level of treason is the most high and dealt with accordingly. Forgiveness is not an option for the president, secretaries of defense and state, joint chiefs of staff, and the commanding general of the area of operation – Afghanistan.

Without having to pay a single penny, the terrorist organizations now have, for free:

Ground vehicles

Upgrading this list, In the days ahead, will face great difficulty. Because of very poor recordkeeping by Congress, the US Office of Management and Budget (OMB), our intelligence agencies, and the Pentagon, determining what amount of equipment and supplies were left in Afghanistan will be nearly impossible to determine. The costs of much of the equipment and supplies were channeled through “black ops” budgets and other “non-descriptive” budgets.

Nobody however is asking two questions concerning this fiasco:

1. Every aircraft has a pilot assigned to it. With the exception of the Cessnas and drones, most of the other aircraft were fitted with in-air refueling capability. So, why were the aircraft not flown out of Afghanistan? Disgraceful!
2. With all the explosives available, why is it that very few of the vehicles, ammo dumps and supply warehouses were blown up? Disgraceful!

The above inactions scream of dire portent. It screams of TREASON!

These treasonous acts must be investigated and the following individuals should be charged with treason:

Biden, President of the US
Antony Blinken, US Secretary of State
Lloyd Austin, US Secretary of Defense
Gen. Mark Milley, Chairman, Joint Chiefs of Staff
Major General Chris Donahue, 82nd Airborne
Rear Adm. Peter G. Vasely

Giving Aid and Comfort to the Enemy
Aided and Abetted the Enemy
