

The Left Hand vs The Right Hand (Presidential Gaffes)

Much ado has been made over Biden's public gaffes. Many believe they are a result of cardiovascular disease and signs of increasing dementia. Since he entered the presidential race in 2019 Biden's gaffes have seemingly increase.

A pattern, identified by the NY Times, has seemingly emerged over Biden's gaffes. Apparently, after making a blunder, Biden quickly amends the slip-up, and the slip-up often dominates the news.

Since Obama's presidency, a renewed socialist movement has emerged on our political and social environments. While many view socialism as something similar to the British and Nordic countries in Europe, the reality is that these countries are not socialist but instead are capitalist nations having extensive welfare systems. On the other hand, many younger adults, who lack an in-depth knowledge of government, economics, and history, view socialism as an economic system, driven by government, which is aimed at bringing about an equitable distribution of wealth. It is interesting that wealthy Democrats (Pelosi, Schumer, Soros, etc.) call for a distribution of wealth but do little to work toward such distribution while increasing their own wealth.

The Communist Party USA and the Socialist Party of the USA have the same goal of ruling the US government. With the COVID pandemic, many of their shared strategies and tactics have come to light. One major strategy, that the media has not picked up on, is to create social and economic chaos.

While the strategy (plan) is to create chaos, many tactics are used. Chief among the tactics is to keep the public "off-balance," that is, to not give the public a chance to figure out what is going on and respond to it. There are two approaches to doing this.

One approach is to create a lot of different situations. These can be social and/or economic in nature. Among the current situations are the illegal immigration crisis, the drug crisis, critical race theory, attacks on religion, riots and looting, attacking law enforcement, and so forth.

Another approach is to redirect people's thoughts. Biden's gaffes play well into this approach, as does the abortion issue and DOJ's attack on Trump.

In both approaches, the idea is to “throw” many different situations at the people so as to confuse them, not allow them to focus on individual situations, and to provide misleading (propaganda) information that seems plausible, but is not.

It is well known that when “too many things” are thrown at people, they become emotionally overwhelmed and often lack the coping skills that further exacerbate the problems. The psychological effects of keeping people perpetually overwhelmed are mental slowness, forgetfulness, confusion, difficulty concentrating or thinking logically, to a racing mind or an impaired ability to problem solve, all of which the socialists want in order to gain control.

The media portrays Biden’s gaffes as memory gaps or part of a perceived dementia. In reality, though, his gaffes are intentional when you consider the continual use of teleprompters, the almost consistent use of gaffes at almost every event, and how often and how soon he corrects his “blunders.”

Joe Biden knows very well what the left hand and right hand are doing, and they are in concert with each other. He knows that his gaffes are intentionally made with the intent to distract from the actions he wants to foist on the American public.

Joe Biden is deliberately NOT upholding his Oath of Office to protect and defend the Constitution of the United States of America.
